Management of Extraction Sockets and Alveolar Defects for General Dentists

Although dental extraction is a bread and butter procedure for the general dentist, it is sometimes not that straightforward. Great difficulties can be encountered not only in the extraction process but also in the management of the extraction socket and the associated dento-alveolar defect, which will be discussed in depth in this seminar.

Highlights of this seminar:

1. Pre-extraction assessment to detect difficult extraction cases.
2. Pre-extraction assessment to detect socket wall and dento-alveolar defects.
3. How to perform atraumatic extraction for the preservation of the socket wall.
4. How to manage socket wall fractures.
5. How to manage a socket that keeps on bleeding.
6. How to manage extraction sockets with pus or granuloma.
7. How to manage large extraction sockets with intact walls.
8. How to manage large extraction sockets and alveolar bone defects.
9. Materials used for grafting of extraction sockets and alveolar defects.
10. How to manage dry socket.
11. How to manage a non-healing socket.
12. Extraction before and after radiotherapy to the jaw bones.
13. Extraction in patients taking Fosamax.
14. Health and nutritional factors affecting socket healing.
15. Q & A Session - ask any questions you want to ask.
